ABOUT ÆTERNITY

æternity is an open-source, blockchain protocol that incorporates essential technological features. The æternity protocol is developed for scalability, efficiency, decentralization, and mainstream adoption. æternity's core software components are written in Erlang by a team of industry pioneers with proven engineering skills. Some of the most experienced senior software developers from the Erlang community are part of the æternity project, including Robert Virding (co-creator of Erlang), John Hughes (co-designer of Haskell), Ulf Norell (the brains behind the Agda programming language for formal verification), and Erik Stenman (project manager of Scala & former CTO of Klarna).

ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

The two-day conference is divided into two tracks: one for entrepreneurs and one for developers.

Æternity Universe One will feature high-level discussions aimed at getting developers and entrepreneurs started with the æternity platform, as well as in-depth analyses of the currentstate of æpps development, business adoption, and the future of blockchain technology.

æternity team members and industry experts will present topics focused on use cases and real-world applications. Pioneers from the world of functional programming will initiate discussions about the æternity protocol and its current and future development.

The main audience of the conference includes entrepreneurs, smart contract and application developers, distributed consensus protocols pros, and techpreneurs.

Æternity Universe One is æternity's flagship event dedicated to future-proof blockchain technology.
